

Dhruv Khanna, the Director of Food and Beverage at The Perry Lane, a Luxury Collection Hotel, in Savannah, Georgia, is responsible for the operations of three lively food and beverage outlets on property including Emporium Kitchen + Wine Market, Peregrin, and Wayward, in addition to overseeing banquets.

Khanna grew up submersed within the world of hospitality. Much of his family worked in the industry, allowing him an inside view into what his future could be, and he simply fell in love. From building relationships, to residing in the midst of controlled chaos, guiding a team to success, to exploring creativity and innovation, and the pure excitement that comes from improve guest relations, were all aspects that appealed to his nature.

He was first drawn to The Perry Lane Hotel because of the location, the glamour, and the uniqueness that it emanates from within its walls. Prior to joining Perry Lane Hotel, Khanna lent his talents to a diverse career beginning as an intern at the famed Gleneagles Hotel in Scotland to Trump International Hotel & Tower in Chicago, Park Hyatt in D.C, Loews Hotels in San Francisco and Seattle, and most recently at Fairmont in San Jose where he led his team through a multimillion-dollar renovation designed to maximize revenue.

Khanna holds an associate's degree from Les Roches International School of Hospitality in Switzerland, a global leader ranked among the top 3 institutions worldwide for Hospitality and Leisure Management and then went on to acquire a bachelor's degree at Kendall College.

With the food and beverage industry continuing to evolve, Khanna plans to put forth innovative initiatives to make both Perry Lane and Savannah a beacon of hospitality, allowing visitors to fall in love, just as he has.
